CITIZENSHIP STATISTICS UNITED KINGDOM 1988

SUMMARY

1. 64,600 people were granted British citizenship in the United Kingdom in 1988, about the same number as in 1987. This was well above the 46,000 in 1986, which was reduced by work on computerisation, and the 54,000 in 1985. The increased numbers of grants in 1987 and 1988 were associated with the ending in December 1987 of the transitional registration arrangements under the British Nationality Act 1981; hence, the increased grants were mainly made on the basis of residence, and mainly to Commonwealth citizens. Grants to Commonwealth citizens increased to 46,900 in 1988 from 41,500 in 1987 and 26,100 in 1986. In 1988 there was an offsetting fall in grants to foreign nationals from 23,000 in 1987 to 16,800 in 1988.

Total grants (Tables 1 and 2)

2. Around 64,600 people were granted British citizenship in the United Kingdom in 1988, almost exactly the same number as in 1987. This was 19,000 more than in 1986, when the numbers were reduced by the work involved in the introduction of computerisation of some of the administrative procedures, and over 11,000 more than in 1985. The higher level of grants was partly due to increased productivity from computerisation, partly to other measures designed to increase output and partly to the higher proportion (67 per cent in 1988 compared with 47 per cent in 1986) of total grants which were entitlements to register as a British citizen under the 1981 British Nationality Act's transitional provisions which expired at the end of 1987; such applications form the simplest types of applications processed in the Nationality Division. In total, some 300,000 applications for citizenship were received in 1987, about 5 times the number received in 1986: this large increase reflected the expiry of the transitional provisions. As a result of this very heavy intake of applications, a new Nationality Office was established in Liverpool in August 1988 and the new office was processing registration entitlement applications during the last few months of 1988. The output from the Liverpool Nationality Office helped to offset the loss of production which arose in the early part of 1988 as a result of the need to divert considerable numbers of staff from considering cases to the initial processing of the unexpectedly large number of applications.

3. In the years 1982-84 grants averaged 70,000 a year reflecting the large numbers of applications received around the time when the British Nationality Act came into force on 1 January 1983, compared with around 25,000 grants a year between 1977 and 1980.

Grants by basis and nationality (Tables 3 and 4)

4. As in previous years, residence in the United Kingdom was the most frequent basis on which people were granted British citizenship in 1988. The number of grants on this basis totalled 44,500, or just over two-thirds of the total, and this was a substantial increase on the 38,600 in 1987 and 23,300 in 1986. Most of the increase was among those granted citizenship on the basis of an entitlement rather than at the Home Secretary's discretion and mainly reflected the ending of the transitional entitlements in December 1987. In 1988 a further 13,100 grants were on the basis of the applicants' marriage to a British citizen, less than the 16,400 in 1987 but similar to the number in 1986. The fall in 1988 was mainly in cases involving the exercise of discretion to naturalise a person (male or female) who has lived in the United Kingdom for three years or more and whose spouse is a British citizen. 6,400 grants in 1988 were to minor children: this was considerably less than the 9,500 in 1987 and continued a decline in such grants since 1981.

5. Also reflecting the ending of the transitional registration arrangements, which applied particularly to Commonwealth citizens, the number of grants to Commonwealth citizens increased from 41,500 in 1987 to 46,900 in 1988 while those to foreign nationals fall from 23,000 to 16,800. Grants to citizens of the West Indies, which had increased from 10,000 to 22,000 in 1987, increased further in 1988 to 25,000, of which 17,900 were grants to Jamaicans, very largely on the basis of residence. Grants to citizens of India increased from 5,200 in 1987 to 7,200 in 1988 and those to citizens of Bangladesh from 3,000 to 3,600. There were also increases in grants to Nigerian citizens from 700 in 1987 to 1,100 in 1988, and to British overseas citizens from 1,300 to 1,800. Among foreign nationals, there were falls in grants to European nationals from 4,700 to 2,500, to South Africans from 3,700 to 1,800 and to nationals of Pakistan from 5,600 to 4,800. Grants to Vietnamese, which increased from 300 in 1986 to 700 in 1987, increased a little further, to 800, in 1988.

EXPLANATORY NOTES

1. This bulletin gives the following information on grants of citizenship:

(a) a summary of the grants of British and British overseas citizenship and British subject status in the United Kingdom and of British Dependent Territories citizenship granted in the Dependencies, in each of the years 1983-88 (Table 1);

(b) a summary of the grants of citizenship in the United Kingdom by the main categories for the years 1978-88 (Table 2);

(c) a summary for 1978-88 of the previous nationalities or citizenships of persons granted citizenship in the United Kingdom (Table 3);

(d) a table of grants of British citizenship in the United Kingdom in 1988, analysed by the previous nationality or citizenship and the section of the British Nationality Act 1981 under which citizenship was granted (Table 4).

The figures for BDTC (Gibraltar) and stateless in Table 4 refer to persons registered under sections 5 or 36 respectively of the British Nationality Act 1981.

2. The nationality shown in the first column of Tables 3 and 4 is the one, or in cases of dual nationality the main one, which the person possessed immediately before acquiring British citizenship. As citizens of the Republic of Ireland are treated in the same way as Commonwealth citizens in the naturalisation and registration provisions of the Acts, they have been included in the Commonwealth section of Table 4.
